Job Knowledge Areas

I. Print Identification Principles and Latent Print Collection Techniques

Knowledge of:

1. Fingerprint pattern types such as loops, whorls, and arches basic to fingerprint identification and classification work sufficient to identify each.

2. Friction ridge skin sufficient to identify the anatomical source and proper orientation.

3. Print characteristics including bifurcations, ending ridges and enclosures as required to compare and match latent prints to inked impressions.

4. Investigative procedures used to identify location of and to collect latent print evidence such as interviewing victims and/or witnesses, establishing method of operation, examining crime scenes, and reconstructing crimes sufficient to gather latent print evidence thoroughly and effectively.

5. Surface characteristics such as: porous and non-porous surfaces as required to identify areas where latent prints are most likely to be collected and developed.

6. Techniques and their attributes used for developing and collecting latent prints such as photographing, tape-lifting, and chemical processing sufficient to render the best results for preserving the evidence.

7. Proper use of latent print materials such as dusting compounds, including: black, silver, and magnetic powders; and various brushes such as camel hair, fiberglass, and magnetic as required to develop latent prints.

8. Latent print testing strategies to advise staff and ensure that conducting one test does not compromise or destroy subsequent tests for other types of evidence on the same object.

9. Proper methods and procedures used to preserve physical evidence as required to preserve and maintain chain of custody evidence requirements.

10. Safety equipment such as safety goggles, protective clothing, rubber gloves and air purifying respirators used to perform work including: dusting for latent prints, chemical processing, and working with airborne and/or blood borne pathogens sufficient to advise staff on how to use them properly.
II. Police Department and Court Procedure

11. Knowledge of the Los Angeles Police Department organizational structure, including the division of major responsibilities within its bureaus as required to perform duties efficiently such as: assigning work, reporting information accurately, contacting and directing inquiries to appropriate entities, and following the chain of command.
